Colors

Introduction
by Esq. Jonathan Olvera

Colors shape our world, not just through sight but through emotion, memory, and meaning. They whisper stories of nature’s beauty, the power of the elements, and the depths of human experience. Each hue carries its own spirit—green with life, yellow with strength, blue with promise, and red with sacrifice.

In Colors, I explore these shades as more than pigments; they are symbols of existence itself. Through brief yet evocative verses, I invite you to reflect on the essence of each color, its impact, and the emotions it stirs within us.

Let us journey through this spectrum together.

Green
by Jonathan Olvera

The observable hints of green are live and decorative.
I enjoy the scene of the green passage.
How splendid and natural it adorns our natural space.
Our breath is carried throughout this tree.
The sun burns and gives us more than just excitement.
Color is a gift of life.
I like it.

Yellow
by Jonathan Olvera

The giant sun paints the sky yellow.
It burns the stones and loosens the food of our fields.
Scenic and important to the inhabitant to see.
It makes a more subtle and definite presence.
Yellow is here.
It is strong.
Yellow is powerful.

Blue
by Jonathan Olvera

The color is in likeness of the ocean and the sky.
The immensity of this shade whispers of promise.
The promise of baptism and of a thirst to be gone.
It is great although I fear it.
How natural is one underneath this.
I want to live the promise.

Red
by Jonathan Olvera

It is my home.
It is the color of sacrifice and the promise of life.
Where can I find more of this shade?
In sin or forgiveness.
Hunger and Red.
I can be Red.
